

Zombie kids like ZRC Spokeschild Tim would like the opportunity to play and learn with Living children, if only society will give them that chance.

We should all strive to judge Zombie children not by the color of their skin, or the lack thereof on some extremities, or even the occasional gaping wound that doesn't bleed, but by the content of their character.

Did You Know..

- Schools commonly teach Living children to fear the Differently Animated?
- Zombie children are often banned from attending school at all for being ‘abominations’ or ‘legally deceased’?
- Zombie History is rarely if ever taught in the public schools?
- Most schools do not have a single Zombie student?
- Zombie Children just want a chance to learn without some school official attacking them with an improvised weapon?

What You Can Do:

- Support the right of Differently Animated children to equal educational opportunities
- Speak out against the glorification of Anti-Zombie violence, especially in school settings
- Be aware of disturbing trends in local education, like a heavily armed student body trained to maim and kill
- Give the next Zombie child you see a smile. Or candy. Candy’s good.

“EDUCATION FOR THE UNDEAD: Won’t Someone Think of the Zombie Children?”
by The Zombie Rights Campaign is released
under a Creative Commons Attribution-Noncommercial 3.0 United States License

EDUCATION FOR THE UNDEAD:

Won’t Someone Think of the Zombie Children?

Zombie Children deserve the same chances to achieve as Living children.

www.zombierightscampaign.org